Second Announcement

The 11th Northeast Asian Conference on Environmental Cooperation (NEAC)

1. Background and Objectives

The Northeast Asian Conference on Environmental Cooperation (NEAC) is a framework for environmental cooperation by exchanging information and views on environmental issues in the Northeast Asian region including Japan, Korea, Mongolia, Russia, and China. The 11th NEAC meeting of this year will be hosted by the China State Environment Protection Administration (SEPA). The meeting mainly wants to cover the environmental issues in this region including governments, nonprofit-organizations and business sectors; roles of education in environmental cooperation in NE Asia, water environment management to improve of water quality, the improvement of urban environment specific focus on urban air quality control. It will also include a session to discuss on the outputs of WSSD and the further cooperation activities in the future in East Asia Region.

2. Provisional Agenda

1) Keynote speeches by each country

A representative from each participating country is expected to give a keynote speech mainly concerning nations' current and major environmental policies for environmental preservation and ways for enhancing environmental cooperation in NE Asian nations.

2) Session 1: Improvement of water environment

This session will cover the general policies and current status of water environment management both nationally and locally in the participating countries: the research on science and technology for the water management, the proficient and efficient transfer of information, the development of the water basin management policy.

3) Session 2: Air quality improvement in urban area

The session is expected to focus on the general air quality improvement policy in urban area, development of environmental sound transportation system, using of automatic-monitoring system on air quality and relevant technologies.

4) Session 3: WSSD Summit and NE Environmental Cooperation

The session will cover the discussion of the outputs of WSSD, the WSSD's short term and long time impacts on the future international and regional cooperation, especially to the Northeast Asia region, the challenges for Northeast Asia in initiating the new environmental programs and for seeking more regional and international funding resources.

5) Open Symposium: Environment Education and Public Environment Awareness

It is recognized that the public environment awareness through environment education movement is taking an extremely role in this region. The non-governmental organizations, together with the national and local governments, have made significant efforts on this process in the Northeast Asian region in past decade. Taking these accomplishments and role of NGOs in this region into account, this meeting will provide great opportunity to share the experience, and expertise of current activities, and suggestions for the future cooperative framework among NGOs in NE Asia.
